

STAR TREK
STRANGE NEW WORLDS

SEASON 2 ADG AWARD PRESENTATION

The background image shows a detailed set of a futuristic dining room. In the center is a circular bar with a white tablecloth and a large, ornate chandelier hanging above it. The bar is surrounded by high-top stools. In the foreground, there are several round tables with white tablecloths and modern, curved chairs. The walls are dark with blue and white lighting accents. The overall atmosphere is sleek and high-tech.

Having created our core USS Enterprise sets in Season One, Season Two of STRANGE NEW WORLDS gave us the chance to focus more widely on the wonderful opportunities to design the very different worlds, civilisations and cultures that we were introduced to episodically. Keeping these worlds unique, distinct and in contrast to each other was a glorious and stimulating challenge.

Wait, a musical? A courtroom drama? The Gorn? We need to be light on our feet!

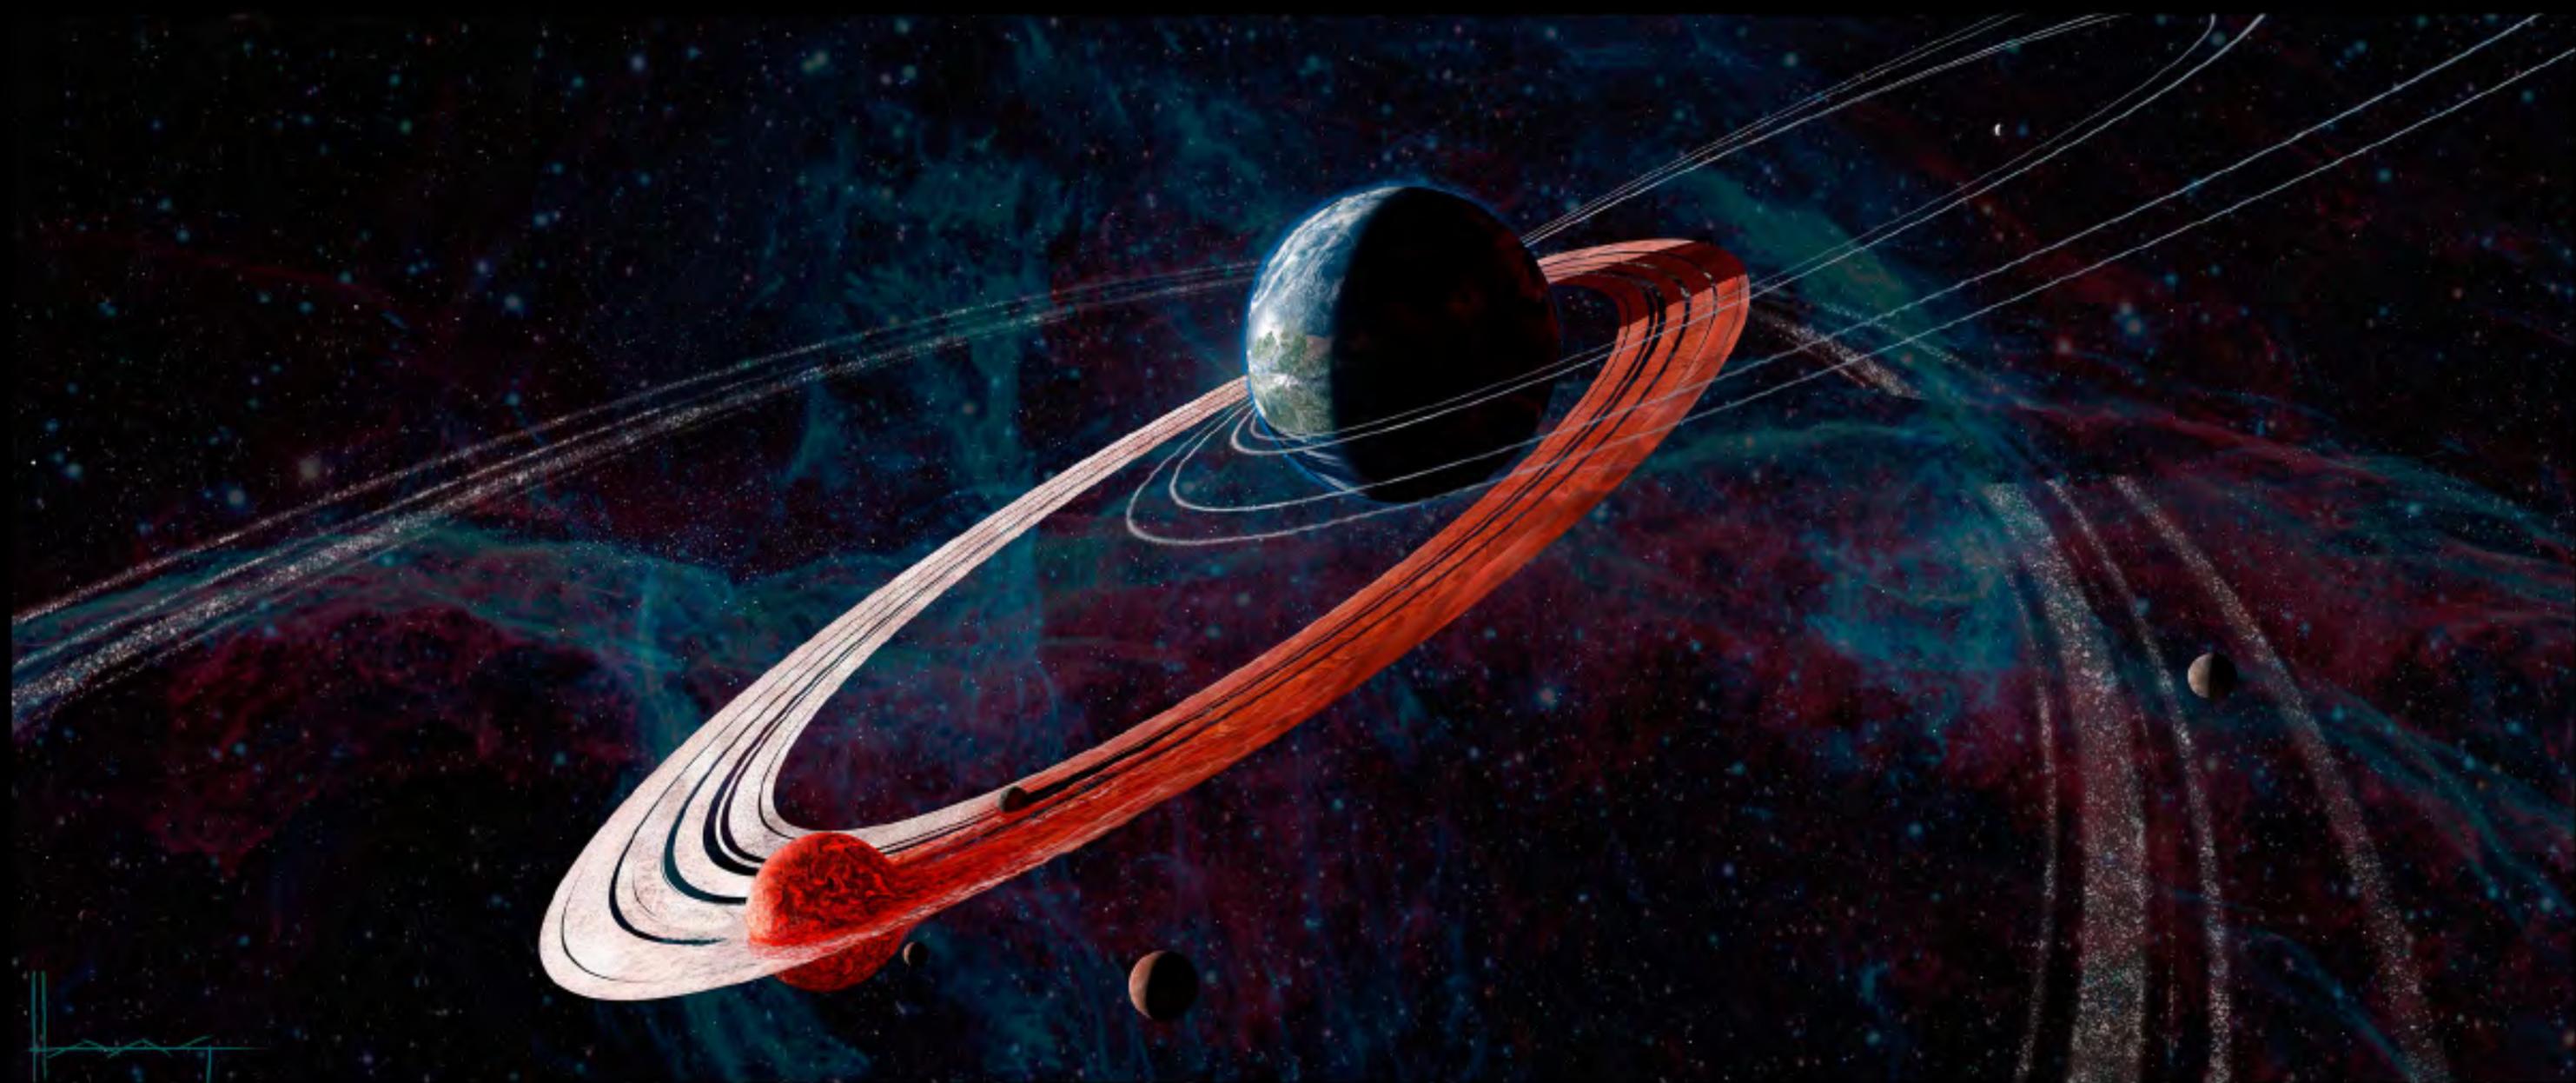

Whilst always respecting our own and the wider Trek canon, we always tried to bring a freshness, quirkiness and a sense of wonder to the look of our show. We were helped greatly in the building some of the concepts by our experiences in creating AR sets, they being crucial in delivering the scope and scale that we were challenged with delivering. In Season One we learned many valuable lessons in what works in AR but, more importantly, what does not work, thus giving us some confidence in pushing concepts to new levels of complexity and scale allowing us to have fun with more outlandish, mind-bending ideas that pushed every boundary; conceptual, technical, logistical and scientific. Guiding us through all this were the Trek mantras of wonderment, optimism and a belief that good will eventually overcome evil.

The Art , Set Decoration, Construction and Props Departments absorbed every concept, however unhinged they may have found it, worked incredibly cohesively and usually made everything even better than could have been imagined, I was humbled every day by their talent, diligence, patience and huge sense of fun, they were an all out delight to work with and I am very proud of what we achieved. I hope you enjoy looking at our work.
